

Niel Gow's Apprentice (Mike Marra)

(1, 2, 3, 4)

Refrain:

Ch: Oh no more will I rove no more it's ov-er. Oh no more will I rove no more it's done.

I'll sit beneath the fiddle tree, with the ghost of Niel Gow next to me, Listen, Niel, your app- ren-tice has be gun.

1. The old man looked in the inglenook and wondered; his brother in a foreign land he must remain. When deived about the life he'd choose, they each would wear the other one's shoes, this motherland is a source of constant pain.

rove no more, it's over. Oh, no more will I rove no more, it's done. I'll sit beneath the fiddle tree with the ghost of Niel Gow next to me, listen, Niel, your app - rentice has begun.

Refrain 2. Rumblin' Brig I hear your music calling; In the outback still I heard your song. Living off a foreign field with far more fish than the Braan could yield, this trip will be my last and it won't be long.

I rove no more, it's over. Oh, no more will I rove no more, it's done. I'll sit beneath the fiddle tree with the ghost of Niel Gow next to me, listen, Niel, your app - rentice has begun.

Refrain

----- A cappella: -----
Oh no more will I rove no more, it's done.—

Niel Gow's Oak, or "the fiddle tree," is where the famous fiddler would sit and compose tunes.
