

The Blues Collection

Blues Ain't Nothing (Georgia White)

Blues Ain't Nothing

Well the blues ain't nothin', no the blues aint nothin'
But a good man feeling' bad.
No, the blues ain't nothin' but a good man feeling' bad.
It must have been those weary blues I had.

Honey, when I die, honey, when I die,
Don't you go wear no black.
Honey, when I die,
Don't go wear no black;
For if you do,
My bones'll come a-creeping back.

I'm a-going downtown,
I'm a-going downtown,
Gonna buy myself some glue.
I'm a-going downtown,
Gonna buy myself some glue;
'Cos the woman I've been loving,
She broke my heart in two.

Georgia White (1903-1980) was born in Georgia, and became well known as a blues singer in the 1930s and 40s, recording over 100 tracks for Decca Records. In the 1940s she formed an all-female band

Blues Ain't Nothing